Two Rezin Orthopedic and Sports Medicine Physicians Board Certified in Sports Medicine, among 1500 Physicians in the United States

Morris – Dr. Raghu Pulluru, MD Orthopedic Surgeon with Rezin Orthopedics and Sports Medicine recently earned his board certification in sports medicine, joining Dr. Stephen Treacy, MD Orthopedic Surgeon with Rezin Orthopedics and Sports Medicine in this accomplishment.

This prestigious board certification makes Dr. Pulluru and Dr. Treacy two of only 1500 physicians in the United States board certified in sports medicine.

When Dr. Treacy completed his board certification in sports medicine in 2007, he was one of only 500 physicians to achieve this level of expertise.

“It was quite a task to complete this certification, but I knew it would better me as a physician when treating the athletes who come to see me,” Treacy said.

Although both Dr. Treacy and Dr. Pulluru were already fellowship trained in sports medicine, both physicians continually strive to gain advanced knowledge within their fields.

In addition to their sports medicine training, Dr Pulluru and Dr Treacy have advanced skills in arthroscopic surgery of the knee, shoulder, elbow, wrist and hand, as well as joint replacement surgery.

“I treat everyone from the weekend warrior playing sports, to middle aged softball players, to elderly golfers to high school athletes.” Treacy said.

Dr. Treacy and Dr. Pulluru are also team physicians for several area high schools, working with athletes, athletic directors, athletic trainers, coaches and family members in preventing and treating sports injuries.
